

TERTIARY EDUCATION COMMISSION

Important Communiqué for the Students enrolled at the Law and Management Business School

The Tertiary Education Commission (TEC) wishes to inform all the students of the University of London (UOL) who were enrolled at the LMBS that the TEC has withdrawn the accreditation of the 2 programmes of the UOL offered by the LMBS with effect from the 15 September 2014. The LMBS was found to be operating illegally without a legally binding Memorandum of Understanding (MoU), which is an important regulatory requirement of the Commission for accreditation of the programmes. Since the students registered with the UOL are external students, they can continue to study their programmes as distant learning students directly with the UOL and will therefore continue to have access to all the necessary requirements including the curriculum, core materials and other support provided by the UOL to complete their programmes. The withdrawal of accreditation of the 2 programmes of UOL which were offered by the LMBS does not affect in any way the bona-fide status of the students enrolled with the UOL. Students are informed that they should refrain from paying any fees to the LMBS towards the above mentioned programmes.
